remain an important part of Munster Rugby history and to some folklore for some time to come. No I was unfortunately not there so I am not one of the 90000 people who thought it was such an important occasion that they had to lie and say that they were there but I wish I had been. I have seen them beat Australia but Australia are not the All Blacks. I was at the opening of Thomond Munster Vs All Blacks game, so close but oh to have been there when they did beat the mighty All Blacks. Condition good Delivery a bit late but it was Christmas after all Service Super - when I contacted the seller regarding late delivery I got an immediate response.

Kurzbeschreibung 31/10/1978 Thomond Park. One of the greatest days in rugby history, Munster beat the All Blacks. More than 100,000 people claimed to have watched the game, even though the ground could only hold 12,000. Now Alan English tells the true story. Pressestimmen "Among the best books ever written on Irish sport" (Sunday Tribune) "Brilliant ... The definitive account. It captures the essence of what makes Munster rugby and its provincial team so unique. For those of us centrally involved it drags us back in time as if the intervening 27 years haven't happened at all" (Tony Ward Irish Independent) "The most engaging book on rugby that I've read in many a year - well researched, splendidly put together with a deft control of narrative. The craft of the novelist with the graft of a hack - it's a winning formula" (Mick Cleary Daily Telegraph) "A terrific combination of intelligent reportage and open-eyed mythmaking" (Sunday Times) "A mine of information on a mythical day in Irish sport" (Sunday Tribune) Werbetext The true story of one of the greatest days in rugby history; now includes a new foreword by Paul O'Connell.
