Unbelievable funny and making you cry at the same timeVon Malik AzizYou like the old-school authors? The ones with always one too many glass of red wine, the sad humour that makes you laugh and lets you swallow that laugh again immediately? This is the right guy for you. Marcel Krueger picks pieces of everyday life and distills them to beautiful meditations. His eyes are like a kaleidoscope: every reflection through them is different from what you expect and enriching at the same time. And did I mention this shit being hilariously funny?

Kurzbeschreibung 'Marcel Krueger takes his turn as prince of the quotidian.' - Kit Fryatt, upstart.ie The Easter Rising, near-fatal plane crashes, Celtic fire traditions, German sausages and battle weary spiders, this collection of thoughts and stories by expat writer and blogger Marcel Krueger has all that and more. Non-fiction and fiction combined to a short book that's part memoir, part travelogue and mostly a recollection of hangovers. A witty and sometimes bleak look at everyday life and its defeats, great and small. 'Not bad.' Haukur Magnusson, Reykjavik
